

Abstract of the Disclosure

A Fourier transforming infrared spectrometer includes an optical element made of a material with deliquescence property, a chamber for housing the optical element, and a drying unit 5 disposed in the chamber for discharging moisture condensed at a cooling portion of the drying unit provided in the chamber to the outside. The drying unit may be a Peltier element.